4 次の英文を読んで、後の(1)~(3)の問いに答えなさい。

“What do you want to become in the future?” Maybe your teachers or parents have asked you this question. Some students choose a job title such as a doctor, a soccer player or a video creator. However, now it is said that some jobs may disappear in the future because of new technology.

In the U.S., some people live and work in the mountains in summer. What is their job? Do they take care of climbers at cabins? Do they hunt animals? Do they cut down trees? No, their job is different. They are fire lookouts. They find fires in the forest or in the mountains. In the U.S., this job is very popular and respected.

There is a fire lookout and his name is Leni. He watches a large area in the northern part of the U.S. It is larger than 1,200 km². This is twice as large as Lake Biwa in Japan.

Summer is fire season in the U.S. During the summer, Leni lives and works in a cabin on the top of a mountain. This cabin has only one room and doesn't have running water. He can't use his mobile phone because it doesn't receive mobile phone signals. Instead of using his mobile phone, he uses a radio for work. When he is not working, he enjoys reading in his cabin.

When there is a fire, he is the first person to see it. He can see fires even in deep valleys or in bad weather. Helicopters and airplanes can't do this. Satellites in space can be used to find fires, but they sometimes make mistakes. Leni can find fires better than satellites.

Leni watches the weather, too, because the weather can change quickly on the mountains. Bad weather can make fires more dangerous. With his radio, Leni helps firefighters by telling them about the weather. Thanks to him, firefighters can help people escape from the fire safely.

Recently, new technology has been improving. Cameras are getting better at finding smoke. Satellites are helpful, but they are not perfect yet. Sometimes they are slow to find fires because they can't see fires clearly. However, satellites will work better in the future. Their data will be able to show people how to escape from fires faster.

Some jobs may disappear in the future. Leni thinks he may be the last lookout on his mountain. Now there are cameras, instead of human lookouts, on some mountains to find fires. However, he thinks the human brain is better than new technology. He thinks humans have different knowledge and skills that they get from life experiences. New technology can't have these kinds of experiences.

Leni is proud of his work. When he tells people his job title, they think he is a hero, but he doesn't think this way. For Leni, the joy of helping people is more important than being a hero.

In Japan, students clean their schools. They clean inside their classrooms, the entrance, garden, gym, and so on. In many other countries, students do not clean their schools.
